

COORDINATING CONJUNCTIONS (and, but, or...)

Coordinating conjunctions connect two sentences.

- ☐ There are seven coordinating conjunctions: and, but, or, so, yet, for, nor.
- ☐ To remember the coordinating conjunctions, use the acronym FANBOYS (For And Nor But Or Yet So).

Each coordinating conjunction expresses a specific meaning:

EXAMPLES	MEANING
Diabetes is a serious disease, and it is becoming more common. (The second part of the sentence gives more information about diabetes)	AND adds information.
Smoking has been linked to health problems, but many people continue to smoke. (Many people smoking contrasts with the fact that smoking causes health problems.)	BUT contradicts, offers a contrast, or introduces something unexpected.
Boris works ten hours a day, yet he has time to volunteer at a homeless shelter. (It is very surprising that Boris has time left for volunteering.)	YET expresses a stronger contrast than but .
The professor may give the students a take-home exam, or he will have them write research papers. (The professor has a choice: requiring an exam or a paper, but not both.)	OR offers a choice.
The car that the police seized at the crime scene had been sold in auction, for no one came forward to claim it. (The reason the car was sold was because no one claimed it.)	FOR means because . It introduces the cause of a cause-effect relationship.
The president did not come because of illness, so someone else gave the achievement awards on her behalf. (Someone else giving the awards is the result of the president's illness.)	SO means as a result . It introduces the effect of a cause-effect relationship.
The discussion was not exciting, nor was it informative. (This sentence tells us two things that the discussion was not.)	NOR removes alternatives. It tells what something is not, rather than what it is.

When using coordinating conjunctions, remember:

- ☐ Avoid overusing the conjunction AND. Make sure you chose the conjunction that communicates what you want to express (e.g., use SO to express a result):

Instead of always using AND	Use a more specific conjunction
The orange farmers wanted to get a better yield, and they used fertilizer.	The orange farmers wanted to get a better yield, so they used fertilize.

- ☐ Do not start a sentence with a coordinating conjunction. Instead use a related transition word:

Instead of starting a sentence with:	Use
AND	Also; In addition
BUT	However
OR	Otherwise
SO	As a result; Consequently

- ☐ Use a comma before the coordinating conjunction.
